That Guy by Kirk Williamson

What is my attraction to short guys about? The sheer cuteness? The promise of a pot of gold? Whatever the cause, the solution this past Saturday was stopping into Borderline Music on Broadway to catch the in-store appearance of American Idol's own Blake Lewis. He was just as short and fuzzy as ever, much the delight of the teenaged girls and middle-aged weirdos in attendance. And, yes, for the record, I am a teenaged girl.

It was hoo-ray for sausages and beans at Scot's "Slap My Ass and Call Me Sally" chili cookoff on Superb Owl (not a typo; I prefer it that way) Sunday. I arrived just in time to sample the prize-winning chili, voted on by the football watchers and awarded during half-time. I don't know much about your sporting games and what-have-you, but I know good grub. This was that.

Check out the sausage queen on page 16.

It had been too long since I had ventured to two of my favorite A-ville nightspots (so THAT'S where we got it from!!!) Sofo and @mosphere, so no surprise that each visit lasted about 2 hours and resulted in many good conversations. At Sofo, Cupcake and I rehashed old Charmers days. He was Cupcake, I was Eclair. At @mosphere, Alex and I waxed philosophical about quality of life, experience and that Mila bitch on Project Runway. Well-rounded we is.

Check out next week's issue (Yes, it'll be in color. GAWD!) for more Mardi Gras and V-day madness.

See you at Gays Got Talent at Spin on February 25!

DANCING ABOUT ARCHITECTURE

by
Marc "Moose" Moder

Hey European Act, We're Over Here...

Yesterday should have been an exciting day. a-ha, one of the best '80s bands still out there, announced its fifth show on its only U.S. tour: 3 in New York so far, and 2 in LA--that's it. The Norwegian band, known sadly as a one-hit wonder here, has been releasing progressively better quality adult pop for the past 25 years with little disappointment outside of the absence of gigs in our country. They've built up a formidable fan base as their writing and performing got more mature and progressive over time. Much like Kylie Minogue found out last year, U.S. record sales mean little when it comes to ticket demand. Kylie, who sells out arenas worldwide, was shocked and stunned at the reaction she got—in the midwest especially—when she decided to book something here. Her concert sold out in no time and was soon moved to a larger venue. Her management clearly had no clue prior to arrival, but as shown on her You Tube blog, she was visibly moved at her reception.

With illegal downloads, and before that import CD sales, there's little way to gauge demand here for European artists with subpar or no U.S. label. Somehow this has got to change as we watch the rest of the civilized world get love from Robbie Williams, Alison Moyet, Faithless, Simply Red, Spandau Ballet, and now my former loves, a-ha while we get the shaft. Don't underestimate our love, you crazy Nords. Ask Erasure, La Roux, Adelle, Depeche Mode, and Pet Shop Boys how much the Midwest loves a European act. The love is there for you. Now time to show some back.

Moose is the co-host of Dancing About Architecture's podcast and writingaboutmusic .com

"Everything I've learned about sex, I've learned from mom. Not literally, ew. I mean, she's told me about it."

"Like, even though your teenager is sleeping and has an algebra exam in the morning, it's OK to scream, 'Shut up and do me!' over and over again."

"And, most importantly, don't fuck on the first date. Fuck to see if there's gonna be a first date."

DATELAND

by Jennifer Parello

The Worst Gigolo Ever

Most of my columns are packed with lies, but the story I'm about to tell is absolutely true. Especially the part about me being much more fetching than my friends.

I was sitting poolside at a Las Vegas hotel with my two best friends and my lady friend. We were fully dressed. Well, let me qualify that. Some of us were wearing bathing suits but we had wisely covered up with those clever, flowing pool pajamas that some nice gay boy designer created to disguise middle-aged sag.

We're all in our 40s and we look pretty good. I'm happy to report that I'm aging the best of all of us! And if any of them wants to argue this point (and, of course, they all will) they can get their own column. But even with my exceptional good looks and raw, animal charm, there's no way to hide the fact that I'm a middle aged gal. And there's certainly no way to disguise my friends' age. They really look it!

So, we were mildly confused when a 20-something boy approached us and began flirting. Aggressively.

He was wearing swim trunks and nothing else. First, he asked for sunscreen, which I pulled out of a large, decorative bag that I had bought in the gift shop for my mom. It was the type of thing that a mom would like, both colorful and practical. I used to like only drab and impractical. But, as you age, you find yourself drawn to things that sparkle, and also items that can multitask.

The boy told us a very convoluted life story that made no sense whatsoever as he slowly massaged sunscreen into his chest. I was so confused by the nonsense coming out of his mouth that it took me a few minutes to realize that he was trying to be sexy.

My friend Stacy attempted to use her mighty passive-aggressive powers to scare him away, but the boy continued to massage himself and ask too personal, too probing questions of us.

I've always found that the best way to end an unwanted conversation is to buy a drink, so I signaled the waitress. The boy licked his lips in anticipation, but Stacy dashed his hopes by shooing the waitress away and announcing that we were leaving.

"I think he just wanted the old ladies to buy him a drink," I said, as we walked into the hotel.

"I wasn't going to spend any money on someone with a nicer ass than me," said Stacy.

Just then, our waitress trotted up to us. "You know what that was all about, right?" she asked. "He's a gigolo." Apparently, young guys hang out at Vegas pools and make a living off aging divorcees looking to have themselves a good time and bring themselves home a social disease.

"A gigolo!" we shouted in unison, and then we looked at him working a couple of blue-haired early-bird special candidates across the patio.

"Well, he's the worst gigolo in the world!" I said. Of all the desperate, middle-aged women around the pool—and judging by the landscape of fake tans, damaged hair, and sorry fashion choices there were a lot of 'em—he picked the only four lesbians in the joint.

"Poor thing!" we cried in unison, our middle-aged hearts bleating maternally. "He'll starve to death."

Later that evening, I saw him sitting next to a slot machine, earnestly chatting up a 70-something gal who refused to take her zombie gaze off her machine. She was wearing a sweatshirt with the HRC logo. I tossed the kid a $10 chip and advised him that maybe… just maybe… it was time to get into another line of work.

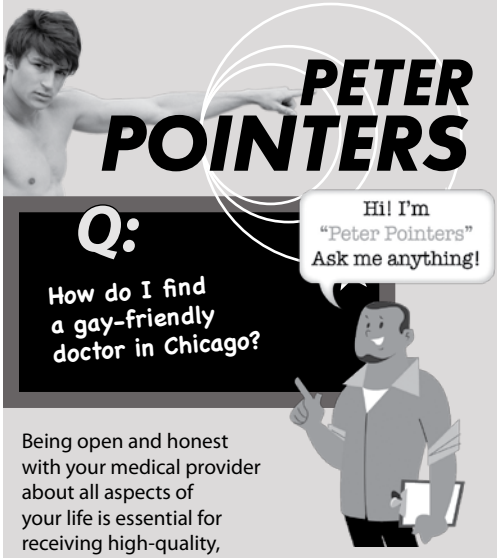
PETER POINTERS



Q: How do I find a gay-friendly doctor in Chicago?

Being open and honest with your medical provider about all aspects of your life is essential for receiving high-quality, comprehensive care. Your doctor needs information from you to understand all aspects of your health. Leaving out information about your sexuality and/or sexual practices prevents them from getting the full picture.

Do some research:
1) The Gay Lesbian Medical Association: www.glma.org, search by zip code.
2) The Alternative Phonebook of Chicago: www.apb-chicago.com, gay-friendly Chicago doctors.

Howard Brown Health Center is the largest LGBT health center in the Midwest and accepts most major forms of insurance. Furthermore, the Center on Halsted, Test Positive Aware Network (TPAN), The AIDS Foundation of Chicago, in addition to any number of other LGBT community organizations, provide referrals to medical care and other services. One of the best options for finding a great doctor, though, is your friends. Ask around and find out who your gay friends and colleagues go to. Sometimes the best source of information is word of mouth!

Be well,

FROM THE BOOTH

by Randy Pubert

Hooking Tommy Defendi

Rentboy.com is hosting a Mr. Chicago Escort of the Year competition at Circuit Nightclub on Feb. 20. The winner will compete at the annual Hookies Awards for a chance to win internationally. Nightspots Magazine fell for contestant Tommy Defendi hook, line and sinker!

In addition, see Tommy at Spin on Friday, February 19 for the Shower Contest.

Nightspots Magazine: Hi Tommy. How did you become sucked into the world of porn?
Tommy Defendi: When I started out I was living in Florida. I was waiting tables and right out of high school. I lived with my cousin and had just moved from Chicago. I put an ad up on craigslist.org because I was looking for stripping jobs. I was one hundred percent straight. This guy found me on there and wanted me to do porn. I sent in pictures to him and that's how I met the people at collegedudes247.com

NM: What was that like?
TD: This was a week of shooting so everyone was running around naked and fucking. I was kind of standoff-ish. I actually didn't talk to them for a couple of weeks after that. I went back to see them; ever since it has been solo, fuck scenes and all down hill from there!

NM: You are pretty new to the game.
TD: Yes. I have been doing it for about two years.

NM: Now do you consider yourself bisexual?
TD: It is one of my biggest frustrations. I am very comfortable in my own skin now. People always ask me what I am. I say "girrrl" more than half my gay friends do. I am surrounded by the gay lifestyle and all my friends are gay. I would consider myself bisexual. I just don't date men.

NM: Do you like working in adult movies or websites more?
TD: I started off on websites but ever since I started working with dialogue, I really like the DVD work. I like being on set for three or four days. I feel more professional than showing up for three hours and leaving.

NM: What makes you the best escort for in Chicago?
TD: I am very personable. My clients say that people can be very rude. When people just want the money it gives escorts a bad name. It makes it harder for me to do my job.

NM: Rentboy.com has been good to work with?
TD: They are the only one I work for. They have taken care of me and I make pretty good money. No matter what city I generally do pretty well.

NM: You are from Chicago but in LA now?
TD: I am moving to Vegas. I was dating someone in New York and now I am in the process of moving to Las Vegas. It has been stressful lately because I don't have an address. I was born and raised in Chicago but moved to Florida when I was eighteen.

NM: I just watched you in Chi Chi's Seize Your Bottom, where you had a blonde sitting on a table like a pig roast!
TD: He is actually one of my very good friends now. That was the day I met him.

NM: Any favorite movie companies so far?
TD: Raging Stallion has been awesome. I am waiting for Chi Chi to call me back right now. I am waiting for her to throw me another movie. It is fun being on set with her and listening to her scream!

NM: You have a Mustang video coming out called Adrenaline?
TD: Yes, the trailer came out a month ago. They said in the spring. I am very excited about that one.

The winner of the Chicago finals will compete in New York City March 19 for the title of Escort of the Year 2010. For more information visit rentboy.com.
